To His Majesty the King

My name is Antonella Corzani and I am an English teacher in a school in Italy.

Schools are open in Italy on Saturday and we watched the Coronation in our classes. The students watched it with great pleasure and curiosity and expressed the desire to write a congratulatory letter to you and Queen Camilla. As you can appreciate their "English" is a work in progress. Getting students to learn a foreign language isn't always easy. Often the secret is to find an interesting topic that fascinates them, then the process is less burdensome. I am happy to say that the Coronation really grabbed their attention and inspired them to attempt to write in English. It seems only right after their efforts that I should pass on their best wishes and observations of the day. The children worked extremely hard and took the writing most seriously. Although I appreciate you have probably received thousands and thousands of letters, I am sending these in the hope that our students receive some kind of acknowledgement from the UK.

Lastly, I hope the letters make you and your staff smile, as I most certainly did.

Yours faithfully

Antonella Corzani
